At the top of the world

Four British explorers arrived at the North Pole early this morning. They were the first all-women team of explorers to walk there. When they arrived, they waited for the plane to come later that day with their friends and relatives. They are staying in the Arctic for another six days, then they are coming back to Britain on 3rd June.

The 700-kilometre walk started two months ago on 14th March. There were five teams of four women. Each team walked over 100 kilometres in freezing weather. They pulled all their food and equipment behind them. The last team began their walk ten days ago and completed it at 5.45 this morning.

Caroline Hamilton, one of the explorers, started to organize the expedition two years ago. Then, in September last year, she chose 20 women for her team. They trained and planned the trip for the next six months. Then they were ready for a really amazing experience.
